LOGAN'S VICTORY.

The Long Contest Over the Illinois Senatorship Ended.

On the 19th the Senatorial contest in the Illinois Legislature, which was one of the most lengthy on record and marked by the utmost determination on the part of both Democrats and Republicans to elect their man, was brought to a close by the triumph of Gen. John A. Logan. When the joint session of the Legislature convened there was a tremendous crowd, both on the floor and in the galleries of the House, it being generally understood that a decisive vote would be reached that day. There were present 51 Senators and 153 Representatives. The Republican Senators all voted for Logan, giving him 26 votes. When the name of Sitteg | ferred to the tug and it was laid on the | President to make the selection. When placed ing up rails, and opened fire on them. It is (Dem.) was called, he made a speech of some length, after which he voted for Gen. Logan, under protest, giving him 103 votes. The announcement was received with the wildes cheers. The Democrats voted solidly for Judge Lambert Tree. After the roll-call a number of Democrats changed their votes to Charles B. Farwell (Rep.), in the hopes of getting some Republican votes, but the scheme did not work. Barry (Dem.) changed his vote to John A. Logan, which insured his election. The roll-call was proceeded with after a time, the Democrats attempting to elect Farwell, Republican, hoping to get some Republican votes. Barry withdrew his vote from Logan, but stated that he would not allow any other Republican than Logan to be elected.

No Republican support went to Farwell, and Speaker Haines finally announced the vote, declaring Gen. John A. Logan elected U. S. Senator.

Upon the announcement of the vote there were loud calls for Logan, who was conducted to the Speaker's chair and spoke as follows: GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REP-RESENTATIVES OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS; I congratulate you on having brought to a conclusion this most remarkable contest which has been going on for nearly four months. I have no words to express my gratitude to the Representatives of this great State of Illinois for the compliment they have paid me to-day. Having been elected for the third time to represent this great State in the Sen-ate of the United States, I hope I have so acted and deported myself in the position before as to bring no discredit upon myself, my party, my State, and my country. My past history is the only guarantee I can give for my future course. From the deepest recess of my bosom I again thank you for the honor you have conferred upon me. There is no position on earth which could be more gratifying than to represent this great State. In this contest, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen which has been an unusually close and heated one. am proud to state that nothing has transpired to mar the friendly relations existing between myself and my worthy opponent. For 30 years this gentleman and myself have been friends, and I trust we will always continue such. [Loud cheers.] I believe there has never been a contest between two persons waged more carnestly for their parties than this, and yet the mutual relations remain so pleasant. I respect Mr. Morrison politically and socially, and I am proud to say we are friends, and sincerely hope we may ever be friends. [Cheers.] As to the other gentleman who was my oppone for a time, I can say nothing against him, nor would I want to. Mr. Tree and myself lived neighbors for many years in Chicago, and I have always had the highest respect for him. He made as good a contest-coming late in the field and being a little short of votes-as he could make. For him I have nothing but respect. In conclusion, gentlemen, desire to say that no matter what may have occurred during the contest, it has been carried on in a spiri 21st inst., near Cecilton, Md., lightning struck of fairness. No such contest has ever been known a two-horse wagon in which Messrs. Coston and in this country before, and it has appeared strange to me that there has been so little excitement and bitterness exhibited.

I leave here having no bitter feeling towards any one who may have opposed me. I respect a man who will stand by his creeds and his friends, and I expect no more from others than is accorded to me. If I go to Washington, I do not go there with any fire burning in my bosom, or a feeling of antag-onism to any party or the present administration.

The contest over the Senatorship has lasted since the early part of February. The Legislature at the outset was a tie on joint ballot, the Republicans having a majority of one in the Senate and the Democrats of one in the House. The balloting began on February 10, and was continued from time to time without result until the election of Gen. Logan. The deadlock was prolonged by the death during the session of a Democratic Senator and two members of the House, one Republican and one Democrat. The latter died April 12, and though his district was strongly Democratic, the Republicans three weeks later succeeded in electing his successor, which gave them 103 votes, the number required by the Constitution, and enabled them to bring the contest to a close.

A DEATH LEAP.

Prof. Odlum's Terrible Plunge from the Brooklyn Bridge. Ottilla Assing, who died recently in Florence, Italy, left about $18,000 in Hoboken

Robert E. Odlum, who had gained considerable notoriety as a swimmer throughout the country, jumped from the Brooklyn Bridge on the afternoon of May 19, and died soon after being taken from the water. Odlum has for some time been contemplating the leap, thinking thereby to get his name prominently before the public preparatory to opening a swimming school at Norfolk, Va. His mother and sister, who live in Washington, remonstrated in vain in regard to his rash determination, and when he left that city for New York telegraphed to the police there to use every effort to stop the suicidal act. All the vigilance of the police, however, was of no ous device, succeeding in throwing them off the scent. While the officers were patrolling the bridge and narrowly scanning all vehicles and pedestrians, a hansom cab, containing a young man in bathing costume, who took occasion to render himself as conspicuous as possible, dashed onto the bridge. Some personprobably a confederate-shouted, "There goes Odlum!" A rush was made by the police towards the vehicle and the occupant seized. He protested against this action and declared he was going to leap from the bridge. While this squabble was going on, a covered wagon stopped in the center of the bridge and Odlum jumped out. In a second he had climbed the railing and was looking down towards the river to see if it was clear of vessels in the spot where he wished to leap. Just at this juncture the police, whose attention had been diverted took in the situation, but too late to stop the fatal dive. They rushed towards the spot where Odlum stood, but before they had taken a dozen steps in that direction the doomed man leaped into the air. A cry of horror went up from the passers-by as the form of the diver disappeared below the level of the bridge.

A tug filled with reporters and club men lay about 100 yards below the bridge. Paul Boyton, the swimmer, stood near the prow anxiously watching the bridge. The moment Odlum leaped from the railing a stop watch was lips only just reached the eyebrow. While put in motion by which it was found that three and a quarter seconds elapsed until he struck the water. For the first 100 feet his body shot down in a perfectly straight position, but when about 35 feet from the water it turned slightly. Odlum waved his arm, which he had hitherto | can be reached by a spiral staircase within the held over his head, in the evident effort to straighten his body. He was too late, and his body in a second struck the water in a slanting position. The water was dashed up to a tremendous hight and the sound of the splash could be heard far away.

In a moment he tug was put in motion towards the place where Odlum disappeared in the water, and as it drew near the spot Boyton leaped off. Soon a white face appeared on the surface, and in a moment Boyton was by the diver's side. Seizing a life preserver which floated near he placed it under Odlum, from whose mouth blood, mingled with froth, gushed. A river boat by this time had reached the two men and with great difficulty the inanimate body of the unfortunate man was dragged in. A few moments later it was transas a bright stream of blood issued from them. he said: "Give me air; I can't breathe," and again relapsed into insensibility. In a few ninutes the dying man's eyes again opened and he said: "What kind of a jump did I make?" 'First-class, my boy," responded Boyton; you'll be all right in a little while." The boat in the meantime was heading for the shore as rapidly as possible, but the unfortunate man had breathed his last before it raninto the slip.

Odlum was 33 years of age, unmarried, but leaves a mother and one sister.

A Fatal Affray. During a baseball match at Lynchburg, Va. on the 25th inst., a young white man, Samuel Meredith, for some offense slappeed a small colored boy, for which he was at once attacked by a number of colored men. As the excitement increased his assailants grew in numbers. He took to flight, with 50 or more excited negroes in pursuit, and finally turned at bay in the doorway of a house, when Louis Adams, a barber, attacked him with a knife. Meredith shot the barber dead, entered the house and escaped the mob. When the excitement had subsided many of the negroes who had followed Meredith admitted that the killing of Adams was done in self-defense, and declared it was justifiable.

A., will call the assembly to order and make the introductory speech. Gens. Green C. Smith and J. R. Ekin, will deliver orations, and Mr. Drake will recite a poem. Gen. Grant's Condition.

The condition of Gen. Grant's health during the past week has undergone no marked change. On Tuesday he was unusually well. He worked for several hours on his book and took quite a long drive. He also wrote the dedication of his forthcoming work, which is: To the officers and soldiers engaged in the war of the rebellion, and also those engaged in the war in Mexico, these volumes are dedicated.

The General's work on his book now will be principally revision, as it was practically finished on Wednesday of last week. He will also probably add some incidents and anecdotes, which may occur to his mind while engaged in revision and correction.

Boycotting Prison-Made Goods.

Canada has instituted a general "boycott" against goods made in the prisons of the United States. A list of such articles has been sent out by the Canadian Government to the provincial custom officers, with instructions not to allow dealers here to import articles made by American prison labor, and to seize any such goods found in the country hereafter. This order was brought about by the importation into Canada of a large number of hay forks made in Michigan State prison, and which were entered as having been made by free labor. The Standard Wagon Company of Cincinnati received notice that two carloads of buggies recently shipped by them to Canada would have to be brought back to the States, owing to a law recently enacted forbidding the importation of goods manufactured

BARTHOLDI'S STATUE

Liberty Enlightening the World. This new Wonder of the World, which is now being loaded on the French transport Isere for shipment to this country, is the largest statue in the world. Some idea of its magnitude may be obtained from the fact that 40 persons found standing room within the head. A six-foot man standing on the level of the workmen were employed on the crown of her head they seemed to be making a huge sugar caldron, and they jumped with ease in and out the tip of the nose. Fifteen people might sit round the flame of the torch, which elevation outstretched arm.

The London Daily News, in speaking of it, says: "It is out and away the largest statue of modern times. The Colossus of Rhodes was nothing to it. It could carry the 'Bavaria' or the 'Hermann' in its arms. It towers to the skies from the yard of the Rue de Chazelles, where it has been eight years in construction, and the view from its coronet sweeps clear of the six-story houses and beyond the walls of

To THE EDITOR: Please allow me space in THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE to answer many inquiries in regard to this part of Northern Arkansas. The land is rolling, soil sandy with clay subsoil. The principal crops are cotton, corn, wheat, oats, millet, sorghum, tobacco, peanuts, and all kinds of vegetables. Sweet potatoes grow large; are of excellent quality. The country is adapted to all kind of grass. There is no better fruit country than this. Apples, peaches, pears, plums, cherries, apricots, etc., grow naturally, and all the small fruits grow in the greatest profusion and are of the finest quality. This country is well timbered, pine and oak being the principal growth; walnut, cherry, cedar, chinkapin and hickory are plentiful. The country is well adapted to all kinds of stock-raising-splendid range, a profusion of natural grass all over the country. Cattle have been on the range for some time and are doing well. We only feed about three months; one dollar's worth of feed is considered ample to Winter a yearling. Our Winters are short and mild; Summers long, and not hot and sultry like those of Kansas; nights always cool and pleasant. This County lies directly south and borders with Howell County, Mo. The Kansas City, Springfield & Memphis Railroad runs through the eastern part of the County. The health of the country is generally good-some malarial diseases on river bottoms exist, however. The country abounds with numerous springs of the purest and best of water. Mammoth Spring, in the northeastern part of the County, is the largest spring in the world; it is 70 feet deep, 190 feet in diameter, and has an available flow of 70,000 cubic feet of water per minute; it forms Spring River, which is 352 feet wide. Religion prevails throughout the country, and there are some good schools. There is still a great deal of Government land to be taken up. Improved lands can be bought at from $2 to $8 per acre. Our coldest day last Winter was 4° below zero, and hottest last Summer was 94°. A crop can be raised here with a pony and $10 worth of implements. This is the best poor man's country I know of; we have numerous small streams which abound in fish. I am 10 miles east of White River. We will have a fine fruit crop this year. People are plowing corn. No drouths here. Comrades desiring special information will be answered personally. No disturbances over politics. Ex-Confederate soldiers make good neighbors.—Patrick E. King, Co. E, 7th W. Va. Cav., Wild Cherry, Ark.

A Tragedy About A Dog.

Early on the morning of the 20th, Louis Francis, a Frenchman, was arrested near North River, New York, while bearing on his back a bag containing the mutilated corpse of a woman who had been murdered. There were ghastly wounds about the head and also on the trunk, from which the blood had flown freely and had coagulated on the corpse. He declared that of a reward being offered for its delivery to its returned.
